The Law Review

by Susan Watson

The University of Baltimore Law Review begins its fifth year of publication this fall. We have received numerous favorable comments regarding our spring issue, a "Corporate Law Symposium", from the legal community. It is recommended reading for all those who plan to take Corporations this spring. Students may pick up their free copies of Volume 4, no. 2 at the Law Library. A "Products Liability Symposium" will be published this year to comment on recent developments in Maryland.

We are planning a fall competition again this year. Any student who has maintained a 3.0 average and who will have completed two semesters by December (i.e. 25 credits for day students and 21 credits for night students) is eligible. A new method of writing the competition piece is being introduced this fall on an experimental basis. Students will still write a traditional casenote. Research, however, will be limited to certain cases, law review articles and other research materials, a list of which will be provided by the editors. Not all of the materials will be relevant; therefore, it will be up to the student to evaluate the materials offered. More emphasis will be placed on legal analysis and writing ability. A meeting for those who are interested in competing will be held some time in late September. Please check the bulletin boards for the exact date.

The Night Side

by Dave King
President of E.S.B.A.

There is a long-standing tradition at the University of Baltimore that says that the Evening Student Bar Association President is supposed to write an article dealing with the problem of apathy. Far be it from me, your humble servant, to break that tradition. Here goes.

Webster defines apathy as, "lack of interest or concern." In the past, evening law students have been accused of being totally apathetic with regard to any extra-curricular activities. This is no longer true. In my two years at this school, I have seen too much interest and concern on the part of evening students to even think of referring to them as apathetic.

Student concern has been responsible for such innovations as teacher evaluations and open exam schedules. Student-run speaker programs have brought prominent members of the legal community to our school to give us an insight into what it's like in the real world of the legal profession. Evening students are involved in both THE FORUM and THE LAW REVIEW not only as writers but in administrative capacities as well. The Women's Law Caucus and BALSA (Black American Law Student Association) draw much of their support from the evening division.

All things considered, I would say that the evening student is not guilty of the charge of apathy, and is as much concerned about the school as anyone else. With that thought in mind, let me say something about the E.S.B.A. The E.S.B.A. is the only organization in the law school whose major purpose is to serve the evening students. All of our meetings are held at night and all of them are open to any interested evening students. If you have anything you would like to bring up before the E.S.B.A., this is your chance to do it. Meeting times will be posted on the bulletin board outside the E.S.B.A. room at least a week before the meeting. If you can't make it to our meetings, leave a note with either an officer or a class rep and they will bring up your idea at the meeting. Remember, the only way we can serve you is if you let us know what you want!

NU BETA EPSILON LAW FRATERNITY

by Robert Lankin

Nu Beta Epsilon National Fraternity, Alpha Chapter Inc. was host to a large crowd at its annual membership cocktail party, in the Garden Room in Towson Plaza on Friday evening September 19, 1975. Speakers at this year's party included fraternity advisor Joel Katz, Chapter Chancellor Donald S. Goldbloom, and Assistant Baltimore City Solicitor (Grand National Chancellor N.B.E.) Harry Chase. This year, University of Maryland students were included among the participants.

Nu Beta Epsilon is a serious professional society and its activities include speaker programs at Sunday morning breakfasts, seminars with practicing attorneys, excursions to points of legal interest and social activities. It was founded at the University of Maryland in 1917 and has been active at the University of Baltimore since 1951. Numerous community figures are among its alumni. It is open to both men and women.

The next Nu Beta activity will take place at 11 A.M. on Sunday October 19, 1975 at the Samuel Owings Inn, Painters Mill Plantation, Owings Mills, Maryland. After a Smorgasbord brunch, Sandra O'Connor States Attorney of Baltimore County will speak. All professors and law students are invited to attend. Admission is $5.40 per person for non-members, members free. Reservations must be made in advance. For reservations or more information please call Donald S. Goldbloom at 358-1546.
